DEATH OF PIONEER

Mrs. Eliza R. Ellsworth Passes Away at Her Home in Layton

Mrs. Eliza R. Ellsworth, widow of the late James H. Ellsworth, died at her home in Layton, Sunday, August 31, 1913, aged 64 years.

Mrs. Ellsworth was the daughter of John and Nancy Jane McCleve. She was born May 3, 1849, in Belfast, County Down, Ireland. Her father joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Ireland. Her father emigrated to Utah in 1856, and the family crossed the plains in the Dan McCarthy handcart company, arriving in Salt Lake City in September, 1856. In 1858 she was baptized by Elder McMullen.

On October 17, 1868, she was married to James H. Ellsworth, in Salt Lake City.

Together with her husband they were pioneers and helped to settle many waste places in southern Utah and Arizona. She was subject to many hardships and trials in crossing the plains. She was called upon to part with her father, whom they buried at Bear river. His grave, among many others, marks the trail of the wondering pioneer of Utah valley.

From Utah the family came to Taylor, Arizona, in 1884, from thence to Luna valley, New Mexico, and from there to the Gila valley, where they have lived since the fall of 1885.

Mrs. Ellsworth was the mother of seven children. One being dead, six living. Those who survive her are: William Ellsworth, Ernest Ellsworth, Mrs. P. H. Beebe, Mrs. F. M. Layton, Mrs. S. A. Merrill and Clarence Ellsworth, all of whom live in the Gila valley. She is also survived by two brothers and three sisters.

Mrs. Ellsworth served and labored in the Layton ward. She was a loving mother and friend to many, and will be missed by many, for she was full of faith, strong of character and of noble and inspiring deeds.

Funeral services were held in the Layton ward meeting house, Monday afternoon, Bishop James R. Welker, presiding. The speakers were: A. E. Jacobson, Peter J. Jacobson, President Andrew Kimball and Bishop James R. Welker.

The interment was made in Union cemetery.

T. K. Wootan and T. J. Power, of Klondyke, were visitors in town this week.

FEE IS ABOLISHED

No Charge for Vehicles Crossing the San Carlos Indian Reservation

According to the following letter received by the board of supervisors from Supt. Lawshe, the fee which has been charged for automobiles and other vehicles crossing the Indian reservation, has been abolished. The letter dated at San Carlos, September 2d, is as follows:

"On August 25th I received a telegram from the Indian Office advising me that the regulations governing right of way or crossing fees had been approved in a slightly modified form, and that full instructions had been mailed.

"The new regulations have now been received and are as follow:

"1. All non-residents driving live stock across the San Carlos Indian Reservation shall be required to pay to the superintendent a fee of ten cents per head for horses, mules, burros and cattle, and two cents per head for sheep; Provided, that non-reservation stock (other than sheep), driven on the reservation for shipment, shall pay five cents per head and for sheep, one cent per head. And provided, that no charge shall be made for vehicles passing upon the highways of the reservation, nor for animals actually in use for transportation or led by halter.

"This, in brief, means that loose animals only shall be charged crossing fees. No fees on vehicles have been collected since the 25th day of August.

"I quote in addition a paragraph from my letter of instructions:

"The regulations are amended as indicated, with the distinct understanding that a crossing tax shall be reimposed whenever the counties fail or refuse to contribute annually a satisfactory sum toward the upkeep of the roads on the reservation used by the public.

"The approval of the regulations necessarily carried with it the approval of the contract entered into for the fiscal year, 1914.

"Please make the funds now due available as soon as possible.

"Respectfully,
"A. L. LAWSHE,
"Superintendent."

GOOD ROADS DAY A GRAND SUCCESS

Seventy-five Men Worked the Road from Solomonville to County Line

ROAD READY FOR AUTO RACE

Workers are Enthusiastic and Many Roads Will Now Be Worked

Good roads day was inaugurated Wednesday in earnest and the result has been most satisfactory.

Thirty-five miles of road from Solomonville to the county line at Ash Spring was worked over and one of the best pieces of road on the ocean-to-ocean highway has been accomplished.

Saturday, R. W. Smith, Wiley Jones and By Smith started out to enthuse the business men and farmers of the valley in the project of a good roads day, with the objective point for the first day's work on the road between Solomonville and Duncan.

Previous to this, R. W. Smith had been to Duncan and had succeeded in getting the people there to start from their end and work the road to the county line. The Duncanites had gone to work at once and had completed their part to within a few miles of the line, which has now been completed.

The result of the labors of the good roads day committee was most gratifying. A good number of men from Safford and Solomonville promised to go out for the day, and others who could not get away from business contributed liberally to the fund.

Wednesday morning, a party of about fifty men left here in automobiles owned by the following: Wiley Jones, Roman Campbell, R A. Smith, Jr., Mack Freeman, Wm. Ellsworth, H. D. Empie, L. G. Haby, Harry Solomon, Harry Kirtland and Robert Nash.

Water, ice and luncheon was hauled out to the workers by two trucks owned by Willie Freeman and and Albert Todd.

When the Safford party reached Solomonville they were joined by R. W. Smith and a party of twenty-five men.

The combined forces then started out and proceeded to the top of the summit dividing Greenlee and Graham counties, and here the work of good roads day began under the direction of William Nelson, Dolph Foote, Ben Mauer, Martin Kempton, W. R. Cosper and A. E. Welker.

The men were divided up into groups of six and transported in autos to the sections they were assigned to work. The road was thoroughly gone over, rocks thrown out, bad places filled in and curves straightened. As fast as one section was completed, the finishing gang was transferred to the next section, and in this way the work was carried along until the party reached the San Jose ditch, about five o'clock, where they were met by the workers from Solomonville, who had completed the road to that point.

Never in the history of road making in this section was more speedy work accomplished. Everyone worked with a will and an enthusiasm that was grand to witness, and the results were most gratifying.

At noon everybody stopped work and enjoyed a lunch of meat, bread, tomatoes, cantaloupe and water.

As a grand result of the first good roads day, the ocean-to-ocean highway from Lordsburg, N. M., to Phoenix, Ariz., has now one of the best roads in the country. This part of the highway gives the automobilist from the east one of the prettiest stretches of road on the highway, running through the fine farming section of the upper and lower Gila valley and passing thru the big copper camps of Globe and Miami on the way to Roosevelt Dam.

No dreary prairie wastes to make the eyes tired, or roads of broken malapie to puncture tires miles away from a habitation. Instead one travels through green fields on good roads shaded by trees and in a country where every few miles there is a good town, with garages and hotel accommodations.

On September 16th the first big automobile road race will be run over the new road just completed from Duncan to Solomonville.

On the way home Wednesday several of the cars made test runs and their speedometers registered from 28 to 40 miles per hour.

The success which attended the first good roads day will now be followed up by other good roads days on which the good road boosters will go out and work over other roads through the valley. It is probable that the next work will be done on the road leading to Willcox, which can be put in fine shape in a short time. The road to Klondyke is another road that will receive attention, and it wont be long until good roads day will have accomplished the best roads in Arizona and will serve to draw hundreds of travelers this way and through the beautiful Gila valley.

TO PRESERVE FRUIT

Formula for Keeping Fruit in Good Condition for Exhibition Purposes

The specimens to be preserved should be the most perfect obtainable, free from all blemishes and imperfections. In most cases fruit of a fair degree of ripeness is better than partly green specimens.

Exhibition jars should be of clear white glass preferably with ground glass stoppers. The tall cylindrical form is desirable, especially for the smaller fruits.

The sorted fruit is first carefully placed in the jar, which is then filled with clear water. After standing a short time the water should be poured off so as to remove all particles of dirt from the jar and contents. The jar may then be filled with the preserving fluid and kept in a dark, cool place until the time of exhibition. Frequent examination should be made to determine how well the fruit is keeping. If the liquid becomes colored from the fruit, it should be poured off and replaced by fresh fluid.

The following formulas have been successfully used at the Colorado Agricultural college, especially with plums, grapes, cherries, currants and gooseberries:

Formalin, 5 parts; saturated solution of common table salt, 10 parts; water (boiled and cooled) enough to make 100 parts. This may be made up by measures as follows: Formalin, 1 pint; salt solution, 2 pints; water, 17 pints.

When made up, the solution will keep indefinitely. Another solution weaker in formalin has also been used here satisfactorily. The proportions are: Formalin, 3 parts; salt solution, 10 parts; water enough to make 100 parts.

For raspberries, the following mixture is recommended: Formalin, 1 part; glycerine, 10 parts; water, 89 parts. Strawberries may be preserved fairly well in a saturated solution of common salt, and better still in a fluid composed of formalin, 1 ounce; alum, 1 drachm; glycerine, 5 ounces; water, three pints.

Red currants keep better in a solution of corrosive sublimate, 1 part; glycerine, 10 parts; water, 90 parts.

The corrosive sublimate must be dissolved in hot water and the solution and fruit preserved in it should be labeled poison, as it is very deadly if swallowed.

The glass stoppers of bottles and jars may be made perfectly tight by smearing the ground surface with a small amount of light colored vaseline. This will also prevent, in a great measure, the sticking of the stoppers when it is desired to remove them.

The above is the formula used by the Colorado Agricultural College, and should be used only for keeping fruit for exhibition purposes, as it is a deadly poison. A poison label should be put on every bottle.

Two Car Loads Early Bar Wheat

The Gila Valley Milling Company has just received two car loads of Early Bar seed wheat. We were invited to inspect this wheat as the cars were being unloaded, and we must say with pleasure that this wheat is the finest, largest and best filled grain and of the most uniform grade of wheat we have ever inspected.

Mr. Ginter advises that the farmers did well with Early Bar wheat last season, notwithstanding the seed was not as clean as expected and most of the farmers planted the seed too late, and yet some of the crops yielded around fifty bushels to the acre, and the farmer received more for the Early Bar wheat than any other grain he raised.

If the best farmers will plant this clean Early Bar seed wheat this season, we believe it will mean a better future condition for our farmers.

Mrs. W. W. Pettis, of Yuma, arrived here Saturday afternoon, to spend two weeks visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Kirkpatrick and her sister, Miss Mary, at their home in Layton.

THE PLOT IS FOILED

Wm. Stewart Planned Wholesale Jail Delivery and Murder of Officers

Details of a plot among the prisoners in the Globe jail to stab Deputy Sheriff Bill Wilson to death, seize his keys and effect a general jail delivery, and, if necessary, kill a number of other persons with guns to be taken from the sheriff's office, were discovered Wednesday. The discovery of the deep laid murder plot followed the uncovering of a place in the upper section of the jail where the prisoners had sawed nearly through a steel wall which was the only bar to the successful accomplishment of their scheme.

Officer Wilson first learned of the plot through a prisoner who was released from the jail a few days ago. An investigation, made quietly and without arousing the suspicion of the plotters, revealed further steps in the scheme.

William Stewart, under sentence of death for the murder of Fred Kibbe, was the ringleader of the plot, it is charged, and his lieutenant was alleged to be Robert Lacey, now awaiting trial for the murder of Jose Peres, the victim of the Miami "Night of Terror."

Lacey, according to the officers, acted as "lookout," while the other prisoners confined in the upper part of the jail sawed at the steel.

The hole was being cut by the prisoners in the steel wall of the bathroom-cell in the northwest corner of the jail. Through this hole they expected to crawl into the "run-around" or corridor into which Deputy Sheriff Wilson steps at night when he throws the levers which lock the doors of the cells inside the "cage."

According to the officers, the plan was for Stewart to crawl into the "run-around" and lie in wait for the deputy sheriff when he came to lock up at 10 o'clock Tuesday night, stab him in the jugular vein and conceal the body. Then Stewart was to take Wilson's keys, release all the prisoners in the jail and lead them to the sheriff's office, which would be empty at that time of night, and there get arms and ammunition with which to slay anyone who attempted to interfere with their escape.

Stewart and Lacey have been removed to widely separated parts of the jail.

WEDDING BELLS

Miss Laura Fonda Becomes the Bride of Harry Archuleta

The marriage of Miss Laura Fonda, daughter of W. B. Fonda, to Harry Archuleta, of Denver, Colo., took place Sunday afternoon, at 2:00 o'clock, at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. C. D. Welker. The ceremony was performed by Judge Charles Yett, of Solomonville.

Only members of the family and two of the bride's former playmates, Misses Rosa and Jessie Ellsworth, were present.

After the ceremony the happy couple received the congratulations of the guests and led the way to the dining room, where refreshments of fruit punch and cake were served.

In the evening the bride and groom stole a march on the young folks, who were waiting to give them the customary noisy reception, and left town in Ezra Madsen's auto.

But, about midnight word was passed along that the couple were located, and five autos loaded with artillery, went to the house and gave them a rousing serenade that brought them back to earth.

Finally, the groom could stand it no longer and appeared on the scene, and in a short speech thanked the serenaders and otherwise squared himself, and peace and quietness reigned once more.

The happy couple will make their home here.

A PLEASANT PARTY

Misses Martha and Edna Schroeder entertained on Tuesday evening, at their home on Eleventh street, in honor of Miss Clara Platt.

About thirty young people were in the party and they spent a very enjoyable evening in games and music.

Delightful refreshments of ice cream, cake, lemonade and candy were served.

YAQUI INDIANS THREATEN REVOLT

Lives and Properties of Many Americans in Sonora are Imperiled

INDIANS WANT THEIR LANDS

State Department at Washington Asked to Send Warship at Once

The threatened uprising of the Yaqui Indians is a menace to the supremacy of the Sonora government, and will endanger the lives and property of hundreds of Americans in Sonora.

The Yaquis demand the lands taken from them during the regime of Porfirio Diaz, when Gen. Luis Torres was military governor of Sonora. The Pima and Mayo tribes, which have also been fighting on the side of the constitutionalists thus far, have joined with the Yaquis in their demands.

Washouts, due to the recent heavy rains, are preventing many Americans from leaving the country by northward journeys to the border. For that reason the state department at Washington was asked to send a warship to meet them at the outlet of the Yaqui and Mayo rivers.

The movement resulted from a warning from American Consular Agent Hostetter, at Hermosillo, who has recommended that all Americans leave the Yaqui country, in even stronger terms, it is said, than the president used in his general request. Hostetter shares the belief of those on the border that the relations between the Indians and Constitutionalist insurgents are rapidly reaching a crisis.

Several small bands of Indians are reported to have taken the field independently. Desertions of Indians from state troops ranks continues. The Yaquis, it is reported, have not receded from their demands that all lands formerly in their possession be returned. Governor Maytorena appealed for aid from Gen. Obregon, who has much influence with the Yaqui chiefs.

The brewing revolt was caused partially by the killing of six Yaquis part of a group that revolted against the state government at Cocorit.

State troops under Lieutenant Colonel Igancio Rodriguez succeeded in quelling the revolt. Rodriguez and his men are reported to be fortified at Navojoa, expecting the Indians to return with reinforcements.

GIRL BIT BY SNAKE

Miss Gladys Spalding Has a Narrow Escape from Death

Miss Gladys Spalding while returning home Monday morning from a visit to the Lone Star mines, noticed that her horse had picked up a stone and stopped when she had reached the second mesa, near the camp of a prospector and his wife.

While stooping to get a stick out of the brush to take out the stone in the horse's hoof, she was bit by rattlesnake on the left hand, between the thumb and forefinger.

She hurried to the prospector's tent, where the woman applied potash to the wound and tied a cord tightly around the arm above the wrist.

Getting into her buggy, she made a quick trip to her home west of town, and her folk's summoned Dr. McWhirt, who dressed the wound.

Miss Spalding is not suffering any serious consequence from the snake bite. The wound is healing and she is able to be out.

Date Is Set for Bids on Bridges

Bids for the San Carlos bridges, for which $35,000 in government funds is now available, are to be received on September 22d, according to word brought to Globe Tuesday by J. S. Miles, who had a brief visit with Agent Lawshee. This indicates that work will be started this fall on the bridges and that they will be ready for use by motorists crossing the continent on the Southern National Highway route early next spring. Mr. Lawshe has already received inquiries about the bridge contracts from a number of large firms and it is assured that the new structures will be of the finest type. —Arizona Record.

GOOD ROADS DAY

The good roads movement has received an impetus this week that we believe will carry it along until it becomes a permanent fixture in the minds of every farmer and business man of Graham county.

As the result of the persistent efforts of R. W. Smith, the booster of Graham county, good roads teams were here Wednesday and a brand[illegible]ay Wednesday making the new road from Solomonville to the county line.

Some contributed their labor; some who could not leave their business for a day, contributed money to pay for labor, and every one is happy because they have contributed in some way to start the work of good roads and to make it a permanent feature for the future.

Good Roads Day will come to be a great holiday, not only in Graham county, but in every county in the state, and in every state in the nation.

Good roads mean everything to every community. To the valley farmer it will result in great benefits in affording transportation of his products to market. To the valley business man it means increased trade. To the automobilist it means the saving of many dollas in the upkeep of his machine. To the ordinary traveler it means a perfect pleasure. Everyone is benefitted, the horseman, the automobilist, the farmer, the business man, and everyone will look forward to Good Roads Day as the greatest holiday of the year, because it gets results that are beneficial.

As an advertisement, good roads has everything else skinned to death. The automobile industry is growing bigger and bigger every year. More people are buying automobiles than ever before, and we see this right at home. Automobiles are expensive principally because of their upkeep, and bad roads produce more tire troubles than bad drivers. Good roads reduce tire expenses and will make the ownership of an auto a real pleasure.

One thing more we might say in perfect truth and that is: The result of the logging of the Southern Highway places the road from Lordsburg to Duncan, to Solomonville, to Safford and through the Gila valley to Globe, thence to Roosevelt Dam to Phoenix, as the best road for automobilists to travel from the east to the coast. After leaving Lordsburg and getting into the Duncan country, the traveler continues through green fields, fine farm lands and glorious scenery, such as viewed on the mountain highway from Globe to Roosevelt Dam, which in itself is a great point of interest.

With the roads from Duncan and through the valley kept in first-class condition and the fact of scenic beauty to help in the advertisement, the Gila valley is bound to win over the southern boulevard route of dreary prairie. It is simply impossible to keep the automobile travelers away from the valley once it is established that our roads are always in the best condition for travel and the further fact that by coming this way, they save 125 miles to the coast.

And this means not only popularity, but the pouring in of hundreds of dollars into the valley by travelers. It means a great traveled throughfare that will build up this community and keep it to the front.

Let us all get busy now and make Good Roads Day a permanent feature in our valley and have it come as often as it is necessary to keep our roads in perfect condition.

ENGLAND AGAINST CHINA

The following article from Reedy's Mirror, of August 29th, fully describes the great and powerful Christian nation when, in the interest of Big Business, she uses her strength to tyrannize over a weaker nation.

China has been fighting that greatest curse to humanity, opium, for years. Has prohibited the growing of the poppy and the manufacture of opium, and imposes the penalty of death on any of its people convicted of violating this law.

For suppressing this greatest curse to the human race, China should receive the commendation and support of every nation of the world. But what do we find? England, the supposedly great Christian nation, says no, and insists that China must import opium from India and continue the curse to its own people. China must obey England. The Christian nation insists that the heathen must continue to degrade himself, so that the Christian may enrich himself. The article follows:

"We say of ourselves, though we get angry if others say it of us, that we sacrifice anything to Big Business. But I don't think we could be guilty of such things as Great Britian is now doing to China to prevent that country from getting rid of the opium curse. General Chang, military adviser to the president of China, has just left England, defeated in his mission to induce Great Britain to prevent the importation of Indian opium into Chinese territory.

"China has destroyed her own poppy fields. But Indian opium keeps coming in by the thousands of tons. China can't shut it out, Great Britain won't let her. Great Britain says the only thing China can do is to buy up the Indian opium coming to her ports and destroy it. China can't raise the money; can't even raise the money necessary to the reconstruction of the government. But China, even at that, has gone so far as to offer to pay for the reshipment of imported opium to India and to forego one million pounds sterling of revenue on that opium. Large amounts of confiscated opium have been destroyed by the authorities.

"Great Britain insists that the opium goes into China under the guarantee of a treaty made wholly in the interests of China, but General Chang points out that the treaty referred to was renewed in 1911 by the Manchu government government in the face of protests from all over China, and in defiance of a unanimous appeal for its abrogation by the Provisional National Assembly—the Republican government in process of formulation—who were of one mind in desiring to enforce total prohibition.

"Great Britain forces the poison upon China, which has suppressed from 80 to 90 per cent of her opium production since 1906. The Chinaman is forced to quit growing the poppy. He is even executed for making opium. But Indian opium, under the British flag, comes in over his headless corpse. There can be but one verdict as to this that it is infamous, devilish.

"One wonders that the Asquith-Lloyd George government, so liberal and humane in so many things, will stand for such a tyrannous, murderous iniquity in the interest of the landlords of India's poppy fields."

GRAHAM COUNTY FAIR

The "GRAHAM GUARDIAN" is doing an excellent work in agitating a Graham County Fair. The creating a sentiment favorable to holding such a fair is worth the efforts of our esteemed co-worker. The opportunity for a good County Fair in the Gila valley in exceptionally good. Every one should put their shoulder to the wheel and push with an "all together push," and the success of one of the best County Fairs in the Southwest is assured.

"The Progressive Farmer and Home Builder" will be glad to give one year's subscription to every one that contributes to this fair by entering any kind of live stock or farm products, including the women's exhibit. The importance of making a success of a good county fair is far reaching. Graham County has the products. Give the farmers an opportunity to show them. Let every one boost for the Graham County Fair.—The Progressive Farmer.

THE COURTESY CLUB

An attempt is now being made to make courtesy pay and be worth while. The Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph company has recently formed a "Courtesy Club" among its employees. The conditions of membership are that the employees to become a member of the club and secure the gold badge must have some special mark of courtesy to the public or made some improvements in the service. The company announces that frequently its subscribers write to the management that some employee has been unusually thoughtful and courteous and recomends that employee to the officials of the company for promotion. The Club intends to enroll as members all employees who have shown consideration enough for the public to earn its good will and opinion and membership in the Club will assist in the employee's advancement. Already over 150 of the Telephone Company's six thousand employees are enrolled as members. The plan is novel and unique and the first of its kind ever started by any corporation serving the public. The company employees in this district are striving to merit a place in the new Club.

HOLDS HIGH OFFICE

Miss John A. Shivers Is Acting Secretary of State of Arizona

"Attest: John A. Shivers, Acting Secretary of the State of Arizona." This is the significant signature that will appear on state documents until either the arrival of Governor Hunt or of Assistant Secretary of State R. E. McGillan puts an end to the regime. Hon. John A. Shivers is the official name of the young person who now holds the position of right hand bower to Acting Governor Sidney P. Osborn.

Should anyone go into the office of the secretary of state in the course of the next few days and ask for "Hon. John A. Shivers," a particularly handsome young woman will rise up from behind a big flat desk and say with a fascinating smile, "This is John Shivers." And should the newcomer persist and say, "But I meant the acting secretary of state," the young lady may reply truthfully, "I am the acting secretary of state."

That ends it, for Mr. Newcomer or Mr. Stranger, or whoever it might be seeking after knowledge, would be looking at the one woman in the United States that holds the highest official position ever held by a woman in America. Now stop and think. If Sidney P. Osborn would drop out of sight for a short time Miss Johnnie Shivers would be acting governor of Arizona. To say that she is not fully able to hold down either of the positions is to but place a limit upon her ability.

The wherefore of all this comes from the fact that Governor Hunt has notified Acting Governor Osborn that he will remain amid the snowclad peaks of Colorado for some time more than he originally intended to. This necessitated the appointment of an acting secretary of state, and Miss Shivers, who has been an assistant secretary in the office for some time, and has proven her ability to handle the office, was forthwith appointed acting secretary. When the news became noised around numbers of young lady friends began drifting into the office offering congratulations, which were received in a very businesslike way. Be it known that the newspaper men were not at all backward in going forward with congratulations either.

Miss Shivers, whose home is in Solomonville, is a typical Arizona girl, forceful, self-reliant, considerate, courteous and of unfailing good humor. The smile of the climate is in her eyes, and the sparkle of health and opportunity that she carries with her is contagious. It is impossible to be idle in the presence of the new secretary of state. She carries her honors in a very matter-of-fact way, as if to the manor born, even if she has yet scarcely reached the voting.

That the business in the secretary's office will see no abatement during her tenure of office goes without saying. Arizona has another distinction to the many, and that is to have the first woman secretary of state.—Republican.

PUBLIC LAND SURVEY

Party Will Commence Work in Graham and Greenlee

For the purpose of surveying a large tract of public land lying in western Greenlee and eastern Graham counties, W. G. Kimball, assistant surveyor general of the state, left Phoenix, August 27th, for Clifton, at which place the surveyor will outfit and leave on perhaps the toughest expedition of its kind attempted in Arizona in a number of years.

For many years the inhabitants of the section of the state now embraced by the county line of Graham and Greenlee have sought to have their country surveyed. It was not until lately, however, that an appropriation was made which would allow of the expenditure.

The work will take the surveying party into the heart of the White mountains, the roughest sections of the state. Those lands lying about the Blue river in Greenlee county will come under the survey. Another tract of land lying along Eagle creek, practically on the county line between Greenlee and Graham county, will be surveyed.

The party will also run a north and south line along the east line of the San Carlos Indian reservation as far south as the reservation runs, the point being the east boundary of Graham county and the west line Greenlee county. In each case it will be necessary to place heavy iron monuments at the section corners, and a great amount of work will be entailed.

The party will probably remain in the mountains about eight weeks. Owing to the inaccessibility and the rough character of the country the work will take a long time in completion, and will mean difficult work.

JUST AS THE STORM WENT DOWN

Adapted from "Just as the Sun Went Down." Composed from true incidents which happened in the Galveston flood, Sept. 15, 1900. (Inscribed to my niece Grace Trueman Stephen).

There in the midst of the wild waves roar,
Just as the storm went down,
Bruised and tossed upon the shore,
Two loving sisters drown,
One clasped a babe, with soft blue eyes,
One held a babe with brown,
Bidding farewell to all earthly ties,
Just as the storm went down.

REFRAIN

One tho't of her Savior in the "Home" above,
Tender and true and tried;
One of her husband, so young in his love,
Youthful in manhood's pride.
One kissed a babe with soft blue eyes;
One kissed a babe with brown;
Looking beyond the storm-swept skie,
Just as the storm went down.

One knew of hope in her Savior's love;
One of her husband's care;
Thinking of death, they looked above,
Breathing a trustful prayer.
One to her Savior, so true and tried;
One for husband in town;
They closed their eyes and trusting died,
Just as the storm went down.

—WM. E. STEPHEN.

NOTE:—After the flood had gone down, two mothers were found dead on the strand, lying side by side, each with a babe clasped in her arms, showing in death that that highest holiest attribute of humanity, "mother love," was the reigning thought in each of their minds and hearts.

CARAVELS OF COLUMBUS

Will Be Seen at San Diego, Cal., During Exposition

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 5.—San Diego is to see the reproductions of the caravels of Columbus, the Santa Maria, the Pinta and the Nina, and the harbor of San Diego is to be the first one on the Pacific coast of the United States to hail them, after they have passed through the Panama canal.

These reproductions of the caravels of Columbus, constructed for the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893, have been in Jackson Park, in Chicago, ever since that time. They will be taken to the drydock at South Chicago, where they will remain until they are made entirely seaworthy.

From Chicago the little fleet will proceed to Boston, and there they will tie up for the winter. In the spring they will be manned by crews of students from Harvard and begin their long cruise. It is planned to skirt the Atlantic, stopping at San Salvador, the first land discovered by Columbus, then on to Panama and through the canal.

Doubtless the little vessels will be compelled to stop at some Pacific port on the west coast of Central America or Mexico for supplies, but the first stop on American soil after their passage through the canal will be at San Diego.

Andrew Kaul, of Boston, a Harvard man, is behind the movement to bring the caravels to the Pacific coast for the exposition in 1915. He has furnished the Jackson Park autorities a sufficient bond to insure their return to Chicago. Winfield Hogaboom, of the San Diego Exposition, has taken up the matter of entertainment of the crews of the ships while they are in San Diego harbor, with Mr. Kaul, and has been assured that the fleet will stop in San Diego harbor for a sufficient time to permit of proper and fitting ceremonies in connection with the Panama-California Exposition in San Diego.

Don't Let Baby Suffer With Eczema and Skin Eruptions

Babies need a perfect skin covering. Skin eruptions cause them not only intense suffering, but hinder their growth. Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment can be relied on for relief and permanent cure of suffering babies whose skin eruptions have made their life miserable. "Our baby was afflicted with breaking out of the skin all over the face and scalp. Doctors and skin specialists failed to help. We tried Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment and were overjoyed to see baby completely cured before one box was used," writes Mrs. Stubler, Dubuque, Iowa. Safford Drug Co., or by mail, 50c. The Siege of the Seven Suitors

By

MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nicholson

"Skip!" she commanded in a whisper, and, catching my hand, she led me off at a brisk run. When we had gone a dozen rods she paused. We heard voices from the stile, where the gentlemen were still engaged in disentangling themselves, and then the planks boomed to their steps as they crossed. They talked loudly among themselves, discussing the cause of their discomfiture. The lantern, I may add, had been knocked off the stile by the thoughtful Hezekiah when she blew out the light.

"Oh, that Hartley Wiggins! I might have known it!" she cried.

"Known what?" I asked, pricking up my ears.

"That he would be afraid of a pumpkin with a candle inside of it. Did you hear that yell?"

"Anybody would have yelled," I suggested. "I think I should have dropped dead if you'd tried it on me."

"No, you wouldn't," she asserted, with unexpected flattery.

"Don't be deceived, Hezekiah. I should have been scared to death if that thing had popped up in front of me."

"I don't believe it. I gave you a worse test than that. When I switched off the lights and swung a feather duster down the stair well by a string and tickled your face you didn't make a noise like a circus calliope scaring horses in Main street, Podunk. But that Wiggins man!"

"He's a friend of mine and as brave as a lion. Out in Dakota the sheriff used to get him to go in and quiet things when the boys were shooting up the town."

"Maybe, but he shied at a pumpkin and can be no true knight of mine. Cecilia may have him. I always suspected that he wasn't the real thing. Why, he's even afraid of Aunt Octavia!"

"Well, I rather think we'd better be!"

"My wheel's in the weeds somewhere. Please pull it out for me. I'm going home."

"But not alone. I can't let you do that, Hezekiah."

"Oh, cheer up!" she laughed, aroused by my lugubrious tone. "And here's something you asked me for. Don't drop it. It's Cecilia's memorandum book. Give it back to her and be sure no one sees it and you needn't look into it yourself. And we've got to have a talk about it and Cecilia. Let me see. There's an iron bridge across an arm of that little lake over there and just beyond it a big fallen tree. Tomorrow at 9 o'clock I'll be there. I've got to tell you something, chimney man, without really telling you. You'll be there, won't you?"

"I'll be there if I'm alive, Hezekiah."

I had found the wheel and lighted the lamp. She scouted my suggestion that I find a horse and drive her home. The lighting of the lamp required time, owing to the wind and rain, but when its thin ribbon of light fell clearly upon the road she seized the handle bars and was ready to mount without ado.

She gave me her hand. It was a cold, wet little hand, but there was a good friendly grip in it. This was the first time I had touched Hezekiah's hand, and I mention it because as I write I feel again the pressure of her slim cold fingers.

"Sorry you spoiled your clothes, but it was in a good cause. And you're a nice boy, Chimney Man. Good night."

CHAPTER XIX.

A Tryst With Hezekiah.

I WOKE the next morning to the banging of Miss Octavia's fowling piece. In spite of the crowding incidents of the day and night I had slept soundly, and save for a stiffness of the legs I was none the worse for my wetting. The service of the house was perfect, and in response to my ring a man appeared who declared himself competent to knock my dress clothes into shape again.

Cecilia met me at the foot of the stairs, looking rather worn, I thought. We were safe from interruption a moment longer, as her aunt's gun was still booming, and I followed her to the library.

"Please don't tell me you have failed," she cried tearfully. "That little book means so much, so very much, to us all!"

"Here it is, Miss Hollister," I said, placing it in her hand without parley. "I beg to assure you that I return it just as you saw it last. Please satisfy yourself that it has not been tampered with in any way. I have not opened it, and it has not left my hand since I recovered it."

She had almost snatched it from me, and she turned slightly away and ran hurriedly over the leaves.

"I thank you, Mr. Ames. Thank you! thank you! You have rendered me the greatest service, and I hope you were able to do so without serious inconvenience to yourself."

"On the other hand, it was the smallest matter, and instead of being a trouble I found the greatest pleasure in recovering it. Is it not possible that in throwing rejected correspondence cards into the waste paper basket that stands beside your desk—there is such a basket, is there not?"

"Yes," she replied breathlessly.

"Is it not possible, then, that that little booklet, hardly heavier than paper itself, may have been brushed off without your seeing it?"

"It is possible, I must admit that it is possible, but"—

"The well trained maid who cares for your room, seeing scraps of paper in the basket by your desk, naturally carried it off. When I accepted your commission last night I went directly to the cellar, sought the bin into which waste paper is thrown and found among old envelopes and other litter this small trinket, which but for my promptness might have been lost forever."

"It doesn't seem possible," she faltered.

"Oh!" I laughed easily. "Possible or impossible, you could not on the witness stand swear that the book had not dropped into the waste paper basket precisely as I have described?"

"No, I suppose I couldn't," she answered slowly.

My powers of mendacity were improving, but her relief at holding the book again in her hand was so great that she would probably have believed anything.

"You see," she said, clasping the book tight, "this was given me for a particular purpose, and it contains a memorandum of greatest importance. And I was in a panic when I found that it was gone, for my recollection of certain items I had recorded here was confused, and there was no possible way of setting myself straight. Now all is clear again. I feel that I make poor acknowledgment of your service, but if at any time"—

"Pray think no more of it." I replied. And at this moment Miss Hollister appeared and called us to breakfast.

"If it is perfectly agreeable to you, Arnold, I will hear the story of the finding of the ghost at 4 o'clock, or just before tea. I have sent a telegram to Mr. Pepperton asking him to be present. He's at his country home in Redding and can very easily motor down. As no motors are allowed on my premises, he shall be met at the gate with a trap."

"You have sent for Pepperton!" I exclaimed.

"That is exactly what I have done, and as he knows that I never accept apologies under any circumstances he will not disappoint me. In addition to reprimanding him for not telling me of the secret passage in this house, I have another matter that concerns you, Arnold, which I wish to lay before him. The new cook that Providence sent to my kitchen yesterday is the best we have had, Cecilia, and I beg that you both indulge yourselves in a second helping of country scrambled eggs."

A little later I met Miss Hollister in the hall dressed for her ride.

"Arnold, you may ride whenever you like. I may have forgotten to mention it. What have you on hand this morning?"

"An appointment with a lady," I replied.

"If you are about to meet the owner of that Beacon street slipper I wish you good luck."

She was drawing on her gauntlets and turned away to hide a smile, I thought. Then she tapped me lightly with her riding crop.

"Cecilia's silver notebook was missing last night. She told me of her loss with tears. She has it again this morning. Did you restore it?"

"It was my good fortune to do so."

"Then allow me to add my thanks to hers. You are an unusually practical person, Arnold Ames, as well as the possessor of an imagination that pleases me. You are becoming more and more essential to me. Cecilia approaches, and I cannot say more at this time."

When they had ridden out of the porte cochere I set off across the fields to keep my tryst with Hezekiah. The air had been washed sweet and clean by the rain of the night, and sky was never bluer. I was surprised at my own increasing detachment from the world. My days at Hopefield were the happiest of my life.

I reached the fallen tree that Hezekiah had appointed as our trysting place a little ahead of time and indulged in pleasant speculations while I waited. I was looking toward the hills expecting her to come skimming along the highway on her bicycle, when a splash caused me to turn to the lake. Dull of me not to have known that Hezekiah would contrive a new entrance for a scene so charmingly set as this! She had stolen upon me in a light skiff and laughed to see how her silent approach startled me. She dropped one oar and used the other as a paddle, driving the boat with a sure hand through the reeds into the bank.

"'Tis morning, and the days are long!

Such was Hezekiah's greeting as she jumped ashore. She wore a dark green skirt and coat and a narrow four-in-hand cravat tied under a flannel collar that clasped her throat snugly. A boy's felt hat, with the brim pinned up in front, covered her head.

"You seem none the worse for your wetting, Hezekiah. You must have been soaked."

"So must you. Chimneys, but you look as fit as I feel, and I never felt better. Did they catch you crawling in last night?"

"I didn't see a soul. You know I'm an old member of the family now. Nobody was ever as nice to me as your Aunt Octavia."

"How about Cecilia?"

"Having found her silver notebook and given it back to her before breakfast, I may say that our relations are altogether cordial."

"Are you in love with her—yet?" asked Hezekiah carelessly, tossing a pebble into the lake. The "yet" was so timed that it splashed with the pebble.

"No; not—yet," I replied.

"It will come," said Hezekiah a little ruefully, casting a pebble farther upon the crinkled water.

"You mean, Hezekiah, that men always fall in love with your sister."

She nodded.

"Well, she's a good deal of a girl."

"Beautiful and no end cultivated. They all go crazy about her."

"You mean Hartley Wiggins and his fellow bandits at the Prescott Arms."

"Yes, and lots of others."

"And sometimes, Hezekiah, it has seemed to you that she got all the admiration and that you didn't get your share. So when her suitors began a siege of the castle, whose gates were locked against you, you plugged the chimney with a trunk tray and played at being ghost and otherwise sought to terrify your sister's lovers."

"'Tis morning and the days are long!"

"That's not nice, Chimneys. You mean that I'm jealous."

"No. I don't mean that you are jealous now. I throw it into the remote and irrevocable past. You were jealous. You don't care so much now, and I hope you will care less!"

"That is being impertinent. If you talk that way I shall call you Mr. Ames and go home."

"You can't do that, Hezekiah."

"I should like to know why not. If you say I'm jealous of Cecilia now or that I ever was I shall be very, very angry, for it's not true."

"No. You see things very differently now. You told me only last night that Cecilia might have Hartley Wiggins Assuming that she wants him! And you and he have been good friends, haven't you? You had good times on the other side. And while Cecilia was in town assisting Providence in finding your aunt a cook you went walking with him."

"I did, I did!" mocked Hezekiah. "And why do you suppose I did?"

"Because Wiggy's the best of fellows, a solid, substantial citizen who raises wheat to make bread out of."

"And angel food and ginger cookies," added Hezekiah, feeling absently in the pockets of her coat. "No, Chimneys, you're a nice boy and you don't yell like a wild man when a feather duster hits you in the dark, but there are some things you don't know yet."

"I am here to grow wise at the feet of Hezekiah, daughter of kings. Open the book of wisdom and teach me the alphabet, but don't be sad if I balk at the grammar."

"I never knew all the alphabet myself," said Hezekiah dolefully. Then she laughed abruptly. "I was bounced from two convents and no end of Hudson river and Fifth avenue education shops."

"The brutality of that, Hezekiah, wrings my heart. Yet you are the best teacher I ever had, and I thought I was educated when I met you. But I had only been to school, which is different. Not until the first time our eyes met, not until that supreme moment"—

"Mr. Ames," Hezekiah interrupted in the happiest possible imitation of Miss Octavia's manner, "if you think that, because I am a poor lone girl who knows nothing of the great, wide world, I am a fair mark for your cajolery I assure you that you were never more mistaken in your life."

"You oughtn't to mimic your aunt. It isn't respectful, and, besides, you have something to tell me. What's all this rumpus about Cecilia's silver memorandum book? Suppose we discuss that and get through with it."

"You see," she began earnestly, "I'm going to tell you something, and yet I'm not going to tell you. So far as you and I have gone you've been tolerably satisfactory. If I didn't think you had some wits in your head I shouldn't have bothered with you at all. That's frank, isn't it?"

"It certainly is. But I'm terribly fussed for fear I may not be equal to this new ordeal."

"If you fail we shall never meet again; that's all there is to that. Now listen real hard. You know something about it already, but not the main point. Aunt Octavia got father to consent to let her marry us off—Cecilia and me. Cecilia, being older, came first. I was to keep out of the way, and father and I were not to come to Aunt Octavia's new house up there or meddle in any way. While we were abroad I was treated as a little girl and not as a grownup at all. But, you see, I'm really nineteen, and some of Cecilia's suitors were nice to me when we were traveling. They were nice to me on Cecilia's account, you know."

"Of course. You're so hard to look at it must have been painful to them to be nice to you—almost like taking poison! Go on, Hezekiah."

"You needn't interrupt me like that. Well, as part of the understanding, and Cecilia agreed to it—she thought she had to for papa's sake—she was to marry a particular man. Do you understand me—a particular man? Aunt Octavia gave her a little notebook—she bought it at a shop in Paris at the time Cecilia consented to the plan—and she was to keep a sort of diary so that she'd know when the right man turned up. Now we will drop the note book for a minute, only I'll say that Cecilia was to keep the book all to herself and not show it to any one, not even to Aunt Octavia, you know, until the right man had asked Cecilia to marry him. Now who do you suppose, Mr. Ames, that man is?"

GREEN WILL FLY AGAIN

At G. A. R. Reunion at Chattanooga in September

GREEN'S CARDUI FLYER

CHATTANOOGA, August 29.—(Special)—The Chairman of the Grand Army Entertainment Committee has closed a contract with Johnny Green, famous Cardui birdman and waterfowl, to make three flights in Chattanooga during the G. A. R. Reunion, to be held in Chattagnooga September 15 20.

Green is the man who made the record flight in Cardui Flyer No. 1 over Lookout Mountain during the U. C. V. Reunion last May. He was the first man to attempt that dangerous flight, refused by so many other prominent aviators. A feature of his exhibition next month will be a flight in his Cardui Flyer No. 2, equipped with hydroplanes, up the Tennessee River. This will be the first hydroplane flight ever made by any Southern aviator.

Visitors to the G. A. R. Reunion will do well not to miss these flights by the famous aviator, free to all, and should look out for the dollar bills, which he drops among the crowds below, as he goes hurling through the air.

Mrs. Glenna McClelland has returned from El Paso and will attend the Academy this winter.

B. Frank Wootan will take Miss Mary Wise to Aravaipa tomorrow morning, where she will teach school the coming year.

On Friday of last week five sacks of mail, which weighed over 150 pounds, were put off No. 10 train. Fort Thomas postoffice business has more than doubled in three months.

For thirty-five years Fort Thomas slumbered and slept. In the red year, 1913, she heard the injunction: "Awake thou that sleepest." She now has a public platform scale and a public water supply. Perhaps, it was Mr. Tuttle with money; perhaps, it was Brother Barnhart with preaching; perhaps, it was Miss Wise with four years hard grind teaching Sabbath school. We delight to think it was a composite result.

Miss Mayme Miller, professor of psychology, elocution and physical culture in Athens college, Georgia, gave a recital here Saturday evening. O tempora! BOWIE NOTES

The Bowie Enterprise Will Appear Today

"The Bowie Enterprise" is now an assured fact, the first issue to appear on Friday, September 5th, the material and press having arrived, and the two editors are hard at work—and over time—"slinging ink and type" and preparing copy. This first edition will be a hurry-up edition, and then more deliberate pains will be devoted to the next issue which will appear Friday, September 12th. This will be a big booster edition, eighteen pages, with a magazine section as a supplement, and will be an exhaustive review in print and with liberal photographs of the rapid development of Bowie and the homesteads adjacent, showing views of heavy laden fruit trees, some of the new residences and business houses and the new brick graded school building.

W. D. Riser and N. E. Miles, the editors and proprietors of The Bowie Enterprise, are from Ft. Davis, Texas, where they published the Ft. Davis Post in the past, and come to Bowie well recommended and well qualified to give a good paper and to serve this community, and they have received a royal welcome and are assured a hearty support, as practically everybody in and around Bowie have already enrolled as subscribers.

Many of the Bowie people and homesteaders have been driving to the Dickerson ranch, south of Bowie, and bringing in fruit the past week. The Dickersons have about three acres of young trees about four years old, and it is reported the yield this year is phenomenal for so young an orchard and the fruit is of excellent size and quality. Peaches, pears, apples, apricots and French prunes. This fruit is selling for five cents a pound, and at the rate of yield is paying at this age of the orchard about $400 an acre.

The Bowie school began Monday, September 1st, with a good attendance. The teachers for the ensuing year are Mrs. Dawson, as principal, and Miss Lee, of Bowie.

THAW LOSES FIGHT

Will Now Be Tried on Undesirable Alien Charge

Harry Thaw lost his fight against deportation Wednesday, when his case came up for trial in the court at Sherbrooke, Canada. Judge Hutchinson sustained the writ of habeas corpus calling for his release. Thaw remained dazed for possibly three minutes. The crowd began to leave the judge's chambers in silence.

Thaw followed aimlessly. As he crossed the threshold, E. Blake Robertson, assistant superintendent of immigration, tapped him on the shoulder and placed him officially under arrest as an undesirable alien. The crowd then surged from the building. It was announced that Thaw will be taken immediately to Coaticook for a hearing.

Thaw's lawyers seemed stunned. Special officers of the immigration department jostled them in the corridors.

"I'll see you at Coaticook, boys," said Thaw, waving his hand to the reporters.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

GOOD telephone service depends largely upon mutual courtesy. The telephone is more useful to those who talk as if face to face, for civility removes difficulties and facilitates the promptest possible connections. As in other intercourse, it often happens that two or more people wish to talk with the same person at the same time. Without courtesy confusion is inevitable, and the confusion is greater when the people cannot see each other.

The operators must be patient and polite under all circumstances, but they will do better work if they meet patience and politeness on the part of telephone users.

The Bell Telephone Service enters intimately into the social and business life of each individual. The best results come through the practice of mutual courtesy.
